

The History of the Christmas Dinner – Editing Task

in modern times, the christmas dinner is something that families across Britain have enjoyed for years. Families have not always eaten turkey and all the trimmings with mince pies. In the past, it was only the rich that could afford the nicer foods.

During medieval times (500AD – 1500AD), the rich would eat goose and a bird called woodcock. Poor people couldn't afford to eat goose as it was a day's wages. On rare occasions, if the rich people got the king's permission, they were allowed to eat swan. Sometimes, the rich ate deer and the poor would eat the parts that were left, like the heart, ears and even their brains.

By the time that Queen Victoria came to reign, chicken and turkey were still expensive. People in the north actually ate beef whilst the people in the south still ate goose. The poor would often eat rabbit as it was cheap. At the end of her reign, more people ate turkey. The turkeys now came from Norfolk and not America so it was cheaper. The turkeys made their journey from Norfolk around October but became skinny after all the walking. They would then need fattening up ready for Christmas.

During the wars, food was rationed and people had to eat chicken as turkey was not available. If there was no chicken, people had to make do with food that was easy to get like mutton (sheep) or rabbit. Treats like chocolate and sweets were also rationed.

Editing Challenge

1. Circle 20 missing capital letters in blue.
2. Mark 15 missing full stops in red.
3. Underline 18 spelling mistakes in green.
4. Mark 1 missing exclamation marks in yellow.

The History of the Christmas Dinner – Editing Task

In modern times, the Christmas dinner is something that families across Britain have enjoyed for years. Families have not always eaten turkey and all the trimmings with mince pies. In the past, it was only the rich that could afford the nicer foods.

During medieval times (500AD – 1500AD), the rich would eat goose and a bird called woodcock. Poor people couldn't afford to eat goose as it was a day's wages. On rare occasions, if the rich people got the king's permission, they were allowed to eat swan. Sometimes, the rich ate deer and the poor would eat the parts that were left, like the heart, ears and even their brains!

By the time that Queen Victoria came to reign, chicken and turkey were still expensive. People in the north actually ate beef whilst the people in the south still ate goose. The poor would often eat rabbit as it was cheap. At the end of her reign, more people ate turkey. The turkeys now came from Norfolk and not America so it was cheaper. The turkeys made their journey from Norfolk around October but became skinny after all the walking. They would then need fattening up ready for Christmas.

During the wars, food was rationed and people had to eat chicken as turkey was not available. If there was no chicken, people had to make do with food that was easy to get like mutton (sheep) or rabbit. Treats like chocolate and sweets were also rationed.

Editing Challenge

1. Circle 20 missing capital letters in blue.
2. Mark 15 missing full stops in red.
3. Underline 18 spelling mistakes in green.
4. Mark 1 missing exclamation marks in yellow.