

Social

This is about your understanding of other people's differences, and your ability to adapt and accept them. It is about collaborating, being flexible and understanding, but also knowing when to be positive and decisive. It is about having respect for, and valuing, the opinions of others and knowing how to resolve issues sensibly where differences arise. It is about respect for property, authority and the environment and ensuring that you make a valuable contribution to society.